

Black History Month – ‘Saluting our sisters’ campaign

26 October 2023

Black History Month is a time of celebration, recognition and reflection. Black people from African and Caribbean communities have been an integral part of British history and society.

As we acknowledge this time, we’re pleased to share with you that our Gender Equality Network have joined forces with the team from Black History Month and have arranged for some fantastic posters to be displayed in each of our offices.

The theme Saluting our Sisters pays homage to black women who had their contributions ignored, ideas appropriated and their voices silenced.

Look at our diversity and inclusion calendar for links to the posters, a picture preview from our Cheltenham office plus more information on local history and the contribution black communities have made to the development of nuclear fission technology.

Last modified by  4 months ago

Add tag

Comments

 4 months ago

I really like the poster and the intersectionality brought to the theme by the GEN. It's introduced me to inspirational black women I wasn't previously aware of, so thank you for sharing :)

2

Reply